

Lady Amabel Yorke – Source 2

Lady Amabel Yorke's diaries contain over 8,700 pages, and cover the years 1769 – 1827. Her diaries give us insight into the life of the British aristocracy and comment upon politics, the Royal family and War.

(41)
Tuesday, Jan: 31st
Visited in the Morning L^{dy} Hardwicke
& M^{rs} C. Yorke who were out, &
M^{rs} Elliot who was at home.
Went at Night to L^{dy} Greys; met L^{dy} Grantham for the 1st Time since her Illness.
Wednesday, Feb. th. 1st
The Parliament met Yesterday
The Kings Speech breathes Peace & Tranquillity, & Reduction of Establishments, & Increase of Revenue & Hopes that the Parliament will find it possible to reduce Taxes.
No Opposition in the H^{ouse} of Lords,
My Cousin Charles mov'd in the H^{ouse} of Commons, & I hear acquitted himself well. M^r Gray mov'd an Amendment censuring the Indian War.

(42)
M^r Fox censur'd the latter strongly, & talk'd against the Russian Negotiation, but that Business seems reserv'd for another Day.
M^r Pitt after answering him inform'd the House that he thought Taxes might be taken off to the Amount of 200000^l, & propos'd the Tax on ~~Carts~~ on Waggon, that on Maid-Servants, & the House-Tax on Houses below 9 Windows.
The House seem'd to like this Good News, & the Majority against the Amendment was large.
Noes 209
Ayes 85
Majority 124

Vyner of Studley Royal, family papers, diary of Lady Amabel Yorke.
Volume 13
WYL150/7/6/13/039
and WYL150/7/6/13/040
Leeds (GB 205)

Transcript:

Tuesday January 31st 1792

Visited in the morning Lady Hardwicke and Mrs C Yorke who were out, and Mrs Elliot who was at home. Went at night to Lady Greys; met Lady Grantham for the first time since her illness.

Wednesday February 1st

The Parliament met yesterday. The King's speech breathes peace and tranquillity, and reduction of establishments and increase of revenue and hopes that the Parliament will find it possible to reduce taxes.

No opposition in the House of Lords. My cousin Charles moved in the House of Commons and I hear acquitted himself well. Mr Gray moved on Amendment censuring the Indian War. Mr Fox censured the latter strongly and talked against the Russian negotiation, but that business seems reserved for another day. Mr Pitt after answering him, informed the House that he thought taxes might be taken off to the amount of 200000£ and proposed the tax on carts and on wagons, that on Maid Servants, and the House Tax on houses below 9 windows. The House seemed to like this good news, & the Majority against this amendment was large.

Noes 209
Ayes 85
Majority 124

<http://www.historytoherstory.org.uk>